Writing Effective Legal Documents and Commercial Contracts

REF: U2127 DATE: 13 - 17 May 2024 Venue: London (UK) - Landmark Office Space Fee: 5300 Euro

Introduction:

It is sometimes said that those who provide written legal advice or prepare contract documents are unhelpful, lengthy, or cryptic. The criticism might be directed at either an internal or external attorney who works closely with the executive team of the organization. However, if the task is done well, the lawyers or advisers might actually increase the written work's commercial value.

Better performing contractors, happier internal and external customers, decreased risks, and smaller liabilities are all results of properly produced legal documents, whether they consist of advice, communication, contracts, or other written items.

In-house and outside lawyers and advisers would benefit from this Writing Effective Legal Documents and Commercial Contracts training course as it will help them hone their writing and legal drafting abilities. It will explain the significance of drafting legal papers in English effectively and instruct participants on how to create well-organized and practical advice and contractual documents.
