Introduction:

The training program for Certified ISO 37001 Lead Auditor equips you with the knowledge and abilities needed to conduct anti-bribery management system ABMS audits using generally accepted auditing principles, methods, and techniques.

To ascertain the efficacy of the policies and anti-bribery procedures introduced as part of an ABMS based on ISO 37001, many firms look for qualified auditors. This training program aims to assist you in successfully completing these responsibilities and to convey the significance of successful ABMS audits. Additionally, it seeks to improve your knowledge and abilities so that you can plan and execute ABMS audits in accordance with the certification procedure outlined in ISO/IEC 17021-1 and the auditing principles for management systems provided in ISO 19011.

The provided exercises, tests, and case studies are made to give you practice in the key areas of an ABMS audit, including ISO 37001 requirements, auditing principles, evidence-gathering tools and techniques, managing a team of auditors, conducting auditee interviews, reviewing documentation, drafting nonconformity reports, and creating the audit report itself.

An exam is given after the training course has been successfully completed. You can apply for the "Certified ISO 37001 Lead Auditor" credential if you pass the exam. An ISO 37001 Lead Auditor certificate, which is internationally recognized and authorized by IAS, verifies your qualifications as a professional and shows that you are capable of auditing an ABMS that adheres to ISO 37001.
